

Stepping over the line?

Please indicate whether you feel you would be crossing boundaries by doing the following where:

Yes = a definite boundary crossing

No = no boundary crossing involved

Maybe = it would depend on the client or the context

	Yes	No	Maybe
Calling your client "mate"
Giving your client a hug
Exchanging your DVD's with clients
Accepting a gift for your child's birthday from a client
Joining a client for a drink on seeing her in a local pub, when you are not on duty
Having a cigarette with a client who also smokes
Lending a client, a couple of pounds on hearing them in the local supermarket explain that they cannot pay for the shopping
Telling a client that you also have experienced the same problem as them in the past
Inviting a client to come with you to watch a local theatre production or sports team play
Telling a client that you think you remember them from when you were both in hospital some time ago
In helping your client in getting their shopping you also get some of yours at the same time
Commenting on a client's new haircut and 'image'
Accepting an invitation from a client to be their Facebook friend
Exchanging text messages with a client
If you are a female staff member, wearing a short skirt to support clients; if a male wearing shorts and a vest in the summer
